Fooling the Pickpockets.

In a group at a club, last night, a well known banker, fingering an empty watchfob, bemoaned the loss of a $250 time-piece, which had been picked from his pocketon the elevated road, in a rush, within a few hours. He expected consolation, but this is what he heard from a railroad man whose wealth is counted in the millions, and who pulled out and displayed a handsome open-faced watch as he spoks, which, but for what he said, might have been taken in his possession for a valuable piece of jewelry: "You were a foolish man to carry so valuable a watch unless you have a fob that is hidden from sight. Now I lost a watch in the same way, eight or nine years ago, so I know you were foolish by my own experience. I went out and looked over good time-keepers of American make in inexpensive cases. This watch cost me just $22. It has kept time just as perfectly as the old one did. None of my friends have any suspicion that the gold is only twelve carat, and that the cases are filled. It looks as well as anybody's watch, and, after all the years I have carried it, if a pickpocket gets it he gets what does him no good, and only makes the annoyance to me of buying another. think I bave the watch business down ine.

The celebrated STEINWAY & SONS GRAND PIANO used on the afternoon of May 28, at the May Musical Festival as an accompaniment to Miss Mary Howe, the renowned singer, in her two songs, "The Nightingale," and "Bonnie Sweet Bessie, the Maid of Dundee," came from the Piano Warerooms of M. STEINERT & SONS CO., 73 East Washington street, Vance Block.

MISS MARY Howe positively refused to sing with any piano except a Steinway & Sons, owing to its sweet and mellow tone, notwithstanding the fact that there had been placed in the hall a piano furnished by one of our esteemed local competitors. The managers were compelled to remove the piano from the stage, and substitute a STEINWAY & SONS Grand at the personal request of Miss Mary Howe, during the intermission.

Our STEINWAY & SONS PIANO-FORTES are indorsed by all the leading vocal and instrumental artists of Europe and America, including our favorite, Theodore Thomas and Miss Emma Juch.

We are the Exclusive Agents for the Eastern and Western States for the STEINWAY & SONS Celebrated Pianos.

leave the room, but the visitor only smiled at him, and quietly continued to gather up the garments and various articles lying about the room. When the drummer threatened to call for the police, however, the quiet and smiling man, who was a constable, deliberately took a gold watch out of the drummer's vest pocket and transferred it to his own. It was only then that he stated the object of his early call. He was serving a writ of attachment, he said, which was sworn out by "a gent's furnisher." to whom the drummer was indebted to the amount of $37.75 for shirts, socks, ties, etc. The account was settled.

THE EFFICACY OF PRAYER. Pretty and Pathetic Story from a Georgia Police Station.

"Uncle" Arnold Frazier is an old, grayhaired negro, well known to all old citizens of Atlants. He is a Hardshell Baptist preacher, and for fifty-five years has been trying to save souls from eternal damnation. Wherever he is, this old man feels no compunction in telling all about him that, unless they mend their ways, they will be punished with bell fire forever and forever. Yesterday morning "Uncle" Arnold met with a group of colored brethren and proceeded to tell how mean and low their actions were, and how they would be tor-mented for them if they did not reform. As is the custom with preachers of his class, his voice rose with his feelings, and soon he was crying in a loud tone and vocif-erous language to his hearers about their going to hell.

This he carried on so far as to be classed under the head of disorderly conduct, and a patrolman had him carried to the station-house on this charge. The parson had his saddlebags, an old umbrells and a package tied up in a red bandana, and with these was carried to the police station, where all city evil-doers are landed. The old man was locked up in a cell, and instead of remonstrating immediately fell down upon his knees and offered

"Oh, God," cried he, "I is yo' po' ole institution pop sarvant, as you knows. I is bin arristed, not a failure.

to-day, an' for Jesus sake let it be right | whole world. We can stand any amount After getting up from his knees the old man exhorted the prisoners to do better, and succeeded in creating quite a commotion among them. He "lined" out a bymn and began singing one of those old negro long-meter songs. The others caught the air and followed. For an hour or two this was carried on, and those around the station-house were attracted inside. When the air was finished the old man began to preach, but was cut short by the keeper entering and telling him he could go.

The old darkey said not a word to the officer until he lifted up his eyes towards the heavens and uttered a prayer, thanking God that he had answered his prayer so A collection was made up for him when released, and he went on his way rejoicing.

BITS OF FASHION.

A great deal of hair and very little hat is the fashionable beauty's present interpre-tation of a stylish head-rig.

Vests have become a part of the bodice, being now tastened to the underarm seams. Many of these waistcoats are used as a background upon which to display exquisite gem set buttons.

Love-knote of velvet ribbon are now worn upon each side of the Medicis collar; one on each side of the basque in front, and a half-dozen upon the outer side of the

A strong reaction has set in, so declares more than one modiste, against the sheath skirt, and women will soon abandon the foolish trick of wrapping themselves up in eel-skin fashion. Certainly there is no accounting for feminine caprice, but just at present it is a most discouraging outlook for re-

Gowns of decided character, and not too light in color, always prove most effective in a large gathering of women. Or, if the color be pale or very pronounced, then the tone of the head-covering, gloves and parasol should be low or very dark, or, better still, black; and very little trimming should be employed. Some of the most effective gowns are in natural shades, that, seen in the piece, do not commend themselves to the piece, do not commend themselves to

The New York Post says: Correspondents who ask hints for bodices to wear with lace and net skirts worn a year ago, are advised to use brocaded silk coats that extend well over the hips. The fronts may have revers, or they may be met at the throat, then slope away to the sides, disclosing a full front of chifton, which has a cravat bow at the top and a pointed belt below. These coats can also be made of satin, with over fronts of pinkish manve, yellow crepe de Chine, or surah dotted with jet nail-

There is still, says a fashion-writer, suggestion of petticoats about the mannish girl, in spite of her scarfs, and caps, and shirts, and vests, but it is a mere suggestion, and that is all. Even the gown, the last vestige of womanliness, is now being built upon the most boyish principles. It is strange, but true, that ugly women have an especial liking for this very trying style of costuming. Laboring under the delusion, no doubt, that this particular mode is extremely stylish, and feeling that prettiness is quite out of the question, wear what they may, they affect a make-up that would make a fright of Venus.

White is again a favorite choice for elegant summer dresses for watering-place wear. Cloth, flannel, embroidered veiling, and soft white muslins will be worn throughout the day; and for evening are toilets most rare and beautiful, of crepaline, China silk, mousseline de scie, chiffon and corded silk exquisitely embroidered in fade colors. Lovely white lace gowns are made up over soft colors, a very favorite fancy being white Venetian lace over deep Spanish yellow faille shot with white, or over pale canary-yellow satin. Honiton lace is used to trim white crinkled crepe draped over yellow satin duchesse.

AS TO OSCULATION.

A Western Opinion as to the Boston Wife Kissing Case-A Custom to Be Encouraged.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The arrest in Boston of a man and his wife for kissing on the public street, has created widespread discussion, in the East-ern press especially, as to the propriety of the act. The judge, although he dismissed the case, was inclined to censure the couple, and refrained from subjecting the officious policeman to severe reprimand. Fastidious, cynical and coldly intellectual Boston editors are inclined to take the view that the osculation of husbands and wives in public is not a crime, but what would doubtless be considered by many high-bred persons worse, as in bad taste.

The general mass of the people, and especially warm-nearted and impulsive Westerners, hardly share this view. They may consider it an unkind act for a man with a pretty wife to kiss her in public and thus revel in his exclusive rights in a way to excite the envy of his fellows, but the question of taste is regarded as depending entirely upon the wife. As a matter of fact, the real misdemeanor consists in the discouragement of marital affection or the harmless demonstration of it. At the present time, when marriage appears to be falling into the sere and yellow leaf and its blessings are gravely questioned, the kiss-ing of husbands or wives, either in public or private, should be viewed as a praiseworthy act, to be encouraged by all. So far from being shocked, people should be de-lighted and should flock around the couple showing a warm and enthusiastic appreciation of marital rights and joys with signs of cordial approval. It tends to make the institution popular and to prove that it is of kissing by men of their own wives. The thing to be suppressed, to fire the worst shafts of society's defensive armament at and to turn the whole machinery of law against, is the kissing by single or married men of other men's wives. That is the real and offensive abuse of kissing.

A Bride's First Lesson. Ladies' Home Journal.

A bride's first lesson is to respect the ex-treme sensitiveness of her husband, who doesn't want people to know he has just been married; consequently she will be wise if, after her first journey, she assumes a gown that has seen wear; if she will forget to look around in a startled manner whenever her husband is gone from her side, as it is not likely that he is either going to be lost or stolen. The next thing is not to kiss him or hold his hand in public, or call him "darling." Any woman can make a man feel her love without making him ridiculous. Another thing for her to learn is, when she is at a hotel, not to grow confidential with the chambermaid, not to give her a piece of her wedding-cake, and tell her all about the marriage ceremony. and tell her how she looked. You think this is never done? Ask at some large hotel. And she shouldn't giggle or look surprised when she gets a letter from her mother addressed to her in her married name. Men are particularly sensitive creatures about some things, and they are rather given to think a woman don't want a name when she acts in this way.

Thought He Was a Fool.

Even when he had gained a considerable reputation, the country people around Concord regarded Thoreau as a fool, and paid little attention to his doings. One after-noon they saw him down in a field in the grass on his knees, his eyes bent on the ground. He remained there almost motionground. He remained there almost motionless for hours, and not one of the farmers who were working about thought it worth while to inquire what he was doing. But the next morning, when they saw him come betimes, and, after poking about a while in the meadow, resume his kneeling position near the same spot, evidently with an intention to remain all day, their curiosity got the better of their general contempt for his proceedings. He had not knelt in the place more than half an hour before a delegation of two or three farmers came up. "Mr. of two or three farmers came up. "Mr. Thoreau," said one of them, "what be you a-doin' there?" The philosopher did not move his eyes from the ground, but auswed slowly, "Watching a toad!" The farmers withdrew, more than ever convinced that the man was a fool.

Uses of Hot Water.

Hot water is one of the best among simple remedies. For instance, headsche almost always yields to the simultaneous application of hot water to the feet and back of the neck.
A towel folded several times and dipped in hot water, and quickly wrung out and applied over the toothache or neuralgia, will generally afford prompt relief. A strip of flannel, or napkin folded lengthwise, and dipped in hot water and wrung out, and then applied round the neck of a child that has the croup, will sometimes bring relief in ten minutes. Hot water taken freely half an hour be-fore bed-time, is helpful in the case of con-stipation and has a most soothing effect upon the stomach. A goblet of hot water taken just after rising, before breakfast, has cured thousands of indigestion, and no simple remedy is more widely recommended by physicians to dyspeptics.
